

Contributors to this Issue

Cassandra Brade completed her master's degree at the University of Manitoba and is currently working in the field of child welfare in southern Ontario.

David Cox is an associate professor in the Department of Psychology at Simon Fraser University.

Sheila Carr-Stewart is an assistant professor in the Department of Educational Administration at the University of Saskatchewan.

Lynda Curwen Doige is an associate professor of Aboriginal education at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton and the Bridging Year coordinator for the Mi'kmaq-Maliseet Institute, UNB.

Karen A. Duncan is an associate professor in the Department of Family Studies at the University of Manitoba. Her research is in family economics and resource management.

Anthony N. Ezeife is an associate professor of science and mathematics in the Faculty of Education at the University of Windsor, Ontario.

John W. Friesen is a professor in the Graduate Division of Educational Research at the University of Calgary.

Christopher Fuzessy lives and teaches in the West Island of Montreal for the Lester B. Pearson School Board.

Manu Aluli Meyer (Indigenous Hawaiian) is an assistant professor of education at the University of Hawaii, Hilo and at Halau Wanana.

Laura Sokal is an assistant professor of education in the University of Winnipeg. She teaches methods courses and is currently conducting research about the underachievement of boys in Canadian schools.

Kimberly van der Woerd (Namgis First Nation) is a doctoral student in the Department of Psychology at Simon Fraser University.

Shawn Wilson (Opaskwayak Cree) is an assistant professor in the First Nations and Aboriginal Counselling Program at Brandon University.