PEDAGOCIAL AD/DRESS
JOCELYNE ROBINSON

2008

Pedagogical Ad/dress. Artist: Jocelyne Robinson.

The pedagogical ad/dress represents a metaphor for the self as an inhabited space holding an address that is not fixed, but is always being added to. The ad/dress embodies the relations to our self-knowing and knowing of other while moving in transitional spaces. The word ad/dress provides many connotations and often masks our private self that carries a particular knowledge based on our past experiences and is in constant negotiation with the present-day narratives taking place. It is the self who transforms the past, present, and future narratives through inquiry in an inhabited space called pedagogy.
