

CONTRIBUTORS

KEN CARTY is a member of the political science department at the University of British Columbia. He has published widely on political parties in western democracies and most recently co-authored Rebuilding Canadian Party Politics (UBC Press, 2000).

BORIS DEWIEL is an assistant professor of political science at the University of Northern British Columbia. He is the author of Democracy: A History of Ideas (UBC Press, 2000).

TERRY GLAVIN is editor of Transmontanus Books, columnist for the Georgia Straight, and author of several books about BC history and culture. His most recent book, The Last Great Sea – A Voyage Through the Human and Natural History of the North Pacific Ocean (Douglas & McIntyre, 2000), won the Hubert Evans prize for non-fiction.

MARK JACCARD is a professor in the School of Resource and Environmental Management at Simon Fraser University. From 1992-97, he took a partial leave of absence from SFU to serve as Chair and CEO of the BC Utilities Commission, regulating BC Hydro and other energy utilities. For the provincial government, he conducted a public inquiry in 1995 and a ministerial task force in 1997 on reforming BC's electricity market.

DAVID LAYCOCK is associate professor of political science at Simon Fraser University. He has written several books, including Populism and Democratic Thought in the Canadian Prairies, 1910-45 (University of Toronto Press, 1990) and The New Right and Democracy in Canada: Understanding Reform and the Canadian Alliance (Oxford University Press, 2001). He is co-editor of the University of Toronto Press Series "Studies in Comparative Political Economy and Public Policy."

MICHAEL MARKER is an assistant professor in the Department of Educational Studies and director of the Ts'kel First Nations Graduate Program. He is co-chair of the committee on "Culture, Ecology, and Education" of the American Anthropological Association. His most recent articles have appeared in the International Journal of Qualitative Studies in Education and the Canadian Journal of Native Education.

JOHN PASS' thirteenth collection of poems, Water Stair (Oolichan Books 2000), was shortlisted for The Dorothy Livesay Prize and for

The Governor General's Award. He lives near Sakinaw Lake on the Sunshine Coast with his wife, writer Theresa Kishkan, and their three children.

PHILIP RESNICK is a professor in the political science department at the University of British Columbia. His books include Letters to a Quebecois Friend (McGill-Queen's University Press, 1990) and, most recently, The Politics of Resentment: BC Regionalism and Canadian Unity (UBC Press, 2001).

ANDREW WOOLFORD is a PhD candidate in the Department of Anthropology and Sociology at UBC. He is currently working on his dissertation entitled "Between Justice and Certainty: Treaty-Making in the Lower Mainland of British Columbia."