

CONTRIBUTORS PAGE

Trevor Barnes is an economic geographer in the Geography Department at UBC where he has been teaching since 1983. He is the co-editor of the forthcoming book, Troubles in the Rainforest, which will be published by the Western Geographical Press later this year.

Clark Binkley is the Dean of the Faculty of Forestry at UBC and a Professor in the Department of Resources Management.

Gail Edwards is writing her doctoral thesis in the Department of Educational Studies at UBC on the meanings attached to literacy in nineteenth-century British Columbia.

Roger Hayter is Professor of Geography at Simon Fraser University. He is interested in industrial geography, BC's forest industry, and Canada's links with Japan.

Tom Hutton is Associate Director of the Centre for Human Settlements at UBC and Associate Professor in the UBC School of Community & Regional Planning. He has published extensively on spatial aspects of economic change in British Columbia, including the role of service industries in urban and regional transformation. Recently, Dr. Hutton has extended his research to include questions of structural change among city-regions within the Asia-Pacific sphere.

Russell Thorton is a North Vancouver poet whose work has appeared in Canadian Literature, the Malahat Review, and Poetry Canada Review. The poems here are from a completed manuscript called The Fifth Window. He is currently working on a manuscript called The Accurate Earth.