

CONTRIBUTORS

---

BENJAMIN L. BERGER is an Associate Professor of Law at the University of Victoria. His principal areas of teaching and research are criminal and constitutional law and theory, law and religion, and the law of evidence. A member of the editorial board of the Canadian Journal of Law and Society, he is co-editor of The Grand Experiment: Law and Legal Culture in British Settler Societies (UBC Press, 2008) and his recent publications include “A Due Measure of Fear in Criminal Judgment” Supreme Court Law Review 41 (2008) (2d) 161-192, and “The Cultural Limits of Legal Tolerance” Canadian Journal of Law and Jurisprudence 21:2 (2008) 245-277.

GERRY FERGUSON, University of Victoria Distinguished Professor, Faculty of Law, is a specialist in criminal law and sentencing. He is a member of the Editorial Board of the Canadian Criminal Law Review, author of “Control of the Insane in British Columbia, 1849-1878: Care, Cure or Confinement?” in Regulating Lives: Historical Essays on the State, Society, the Individual, and the Law, eds. J. McLaren, R. Menzies, and D. Chunn (UBC Press, 2002), and co-author of Annual Review of Criminal Law and Canadian Criminal Jury Instructions.

HAMAR FOSTER is a Professor of Law at the University of Victoria. He currently teaches Property Law, the Law of Evidence, Legal History and Aboriginal Law. His primary research interest is the legal history of Aboriginal/non-Aboriginal relations in British Columbia.

JUDY FUDGE is Professor and Lansdowne Chair in Law at the University of Victoria Faculty of Law. She has written extensively about the history of labour law in Canada, and specifically about the legal regulation of women’s work. Together with Eric Tucker she published Labour Before the Law: The Legal Regulation of Workers’ Collective Action 1900 to 1948.

DOUGLAS C. HARRIS is an Associate Professor and Associate Dean Graduate Studies and Research in the Faculty of Law at the University of British Columbia. He is the author of two books on the fisheries – Fish, Law, and Colonialism: The Legal Capture of Salmon in British Columbia (2001) and Landing Native Fisheries: Indian Reserves and Fishing Rights in British Columbia, 1849–1925 (2008) – and is currently working on a study that uses Vancouver’s False Creek and the neighbourhoods around it to explore the role of property law in the construction of the city.

ROSS LAMBERTSON teaches Political Science at Camosun College in Victoria. He has written several articles about the history of human rights and civil liberties in Canada, and is also the author of Repression and Resistance: Canadian Human Rights Activists, 1930–1960 (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2005).

JOHN MCLAREN is Professor Emeritus of Law at the University of Victoria. He researches in the areas of Canadian and comparative colonial legal history. He is currently working on a book on judicial tenure and accountability in the nineteenth century British Empire through the stories of colonial judges who were removed or threatened with removal from office.

W. WESLEY PUE is Professor of Law at the University of British Columbia. His research interests are in the fields of policing, security and the rule of law and the history of the legal profession in Britain, Canada, and in comparative colonial perspective.

JANIS SARRA is Professor of Law, University of British Columbia Faculty of Law, and Director of the National Centre for Business Law. She researches and writes in the areas of corporate law and corporate finance, securities law and commercial insolvency law.

ERIC TUCKER is a professor at Osgoode Hall Law School, York University. His research primarily focuses on the history and current development of labour and employment law. He is the author of Administering Danger in the Workplace (1990) and co-author of Labour before the Law (2001, with Judy Fudge) and Self-Employed Workers Organize (2005, with Cynthia Cranford, Judy Fudge and Leah Vosko). He is also the editor of Working Disasters: The Politics of Recognition and Response (2006).