

Flower-Girl

Katie Fedosenko

Ignite, Vol 3, Number 1, Spring 2011 p. 77 (Poem)

Published by Women's and Gender Studies Department at The University of British Columbia

For more Ignite, please visit: <http://ojs.library.ubc.ca/index.php/ignite>

Flower-Girl

Katie Fedosenko

Petals almost wilted
Stamin and pistil
Dis-inte-grating.

Lotus blossom blows away
Wet water lily lady leaves
Pussy willow cousins wave
Goodbye garden gates.

Say, Nora seeds spreads
In-full-trating
Sand and shells on the sea shore
You can't be sold anymore.

Wallflower wonders and wanders to Mayflower margins and white picket fences
where isolated ivy crawls precariously perched on the edge of Eden.

Flower-girl flees.

No more name for you, flower-girl,
Genus get gone
Forget your family.

Your flesh is ripe now, flower-girl
Fall before you're picked.

Return to my earth, flowergirl.
Limbo, fluid, flexible, moving, bio-massive Home.